

Abstract

The invention relates to a method and a corresponding plant for the extraction and/or encapsulation of living cells from organs. In a first step, the organ containing the cells is disintegrated in an enzymatic process into individual cells or cell agglomerations. The relevant cells are then isolated from the obtained cell mixture. The so extracted cells can then be encapsulated. The invention describes a technical process and a plant combining these three steps.